LONDON, Jan. 28—A stiffer attitude toward the dictatorships, but with conciliation and appeasement still uppermost, is expected to be adopted by Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain tonight in an address before his home constituency at Birmingham.

'HUMAN TORCH' SLAYING BRINGS JERSEY INQUIRY

CLIFFSIDE PARK, N. J., Jan. 28—Police today investigated a human torch slaying which brought a gruesome death to a 50 year old plumber.

Hearing shrieks of agony, Policeman Joseph Borrell hastened to the Cliffside Park home of Anthony Mazur, 48. There the policeman was horrified to see the plumber, John L. Scullion, ablaze from head to foot.

Scullion fell at the policeman's feet and died later in a hospital. Mazur was found cowering in another room. He was removed to the psychopathic ward at the Bergen county home.

Borrell said Mazur sent for Scullion to do some plumbing work, doused him with turpentine and set him off like a human torch.

Intangible Taxes May Be Put In General Funds Of Various Counties

COLUMBUS, Jan. 28—Matching requirements in the new poor relief bill for 1939 may be switched from the dollar-for-dollar demand to a 3-1 basis if urban centers can show that enabling legislation will be inadequate, house leaders indicated today.

Republican Majority Leader J. Harry McGregor revealed that four members from the house and four from the senate would begin work shortly on temporary drafting of a relief measure that will solve the problem at least until Dec. 31.

"No one knows how much will be needed for relief," McGregor said, "and for that reason there remains a great deal of doubt whether the proposed enabling legislation will provide the cities with enough matching funds."

Possibility Cited

McGregor admitted there was a possibility of matching being reduced which would require cities to put up one dollar for every three dollars allotted by the state.

The present temporary relief bill which appropriated $5,000,000 until July 1 requires matching on an even basis.

On the basis of $5,000,000 for six months, it would appear that relief needs for the year would be taken care of by another appropriation.

FAMED EXPERT

ON BOTANY AT UNIVERSITY DIES

COLUMBUS, Jan. 28—Professor John Henry Schaffner, world renowned botanist and research professor at Ohio State university since 1938, was dead today at 72, victim of a heart attack to which he succumbed a few hours after being rushed to a hospital.

The noted scientist had been associated with the department of botany at Ohio State since 1897. He served as head of the department from 1908 to 1918. His teaching career began at the University of Michigan. He also taught for a short time at the University of South Dakota.

A native of Agosta, Marion county, O., Professor Schaffner won international recognition in the scientific world for his discovery of the chromosome reduction process in plants on which the Mendelian phenomena are based.

He also demonstrated successfully the principle of sex reversal in plants and discovered various ecological conditions for inducing change in sex in the individual plant. He also was the author of several books on trees, plants and flowers of Ohio.

Surviving him are his widow, Cordelia Garber Schaffner, a daughter, Grace, and two sons, John and James.

"Miracle" Birth

EIGHT minutes after the death of his mother, this five-pound baby boy was born in a Jackson Heights, L. I., hospital. The birth of the baby was made possible by an emergency Caesarian operation performed by Dr. Samuel Berman, shown, and Dr. Louis Perillo.

SERUM, VACCINE SENT TO CHILE

262 Pounds Consigned From Miami; Quake's Death Toll Set At 30,000

MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 28—Two hundred and sixty-two pounds of serum and vaccine were sent from Miami this morning to Chile aboard a pan-American clipper.

The serum was consigned to the Red Cross in Santiago, Chile, and pan-American officials ordered it to be given precedence over both passengers and express.

Arrangements to rush the medical supplies were made with Red Cross officials at Washington and Santiago.

SANTIAGO, Chile, Jan. 28—While the Chilean government continued to withhold official estimates of casualties in Wednesday's earthquake, the consensus of newspaper reports today indicated that at least 30,000 persons were killed or died later from injuries. More than 60,000 were injured. These reports held.

Troops and relief workers worked all night in desperate efforts to remove the dazed and sorrowing survivors from Chillan, the devastated southern city which the government has condemned to be burned. Great quantities of gasoline are already at Chillan ready for the torch.

The chief of the civil register at Chillan announced that 9,800 lost their lives there, and the similar officer at Concepcion, southern capital, put the dead there at 2,000.

Relief trains and airplanes are now rushing supplies from all parts of Chile and Argentina.

Attempt To Keep Program Out Of Politics May Be Approved

Many Claim Setback Worst Since Court Reform Act Was Refused

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28—Without a murmur of opposition, the senate today adopted amendments to the $725,000,000 emergency W. P. A. appropriation bill to impose heavy penalties on relief officials and employees who participate in political campaigns.

The senate's action came without a record vote and contrasted sharply with the dispute in the last session of congress—and before the 1938 election—when the Hatch amendments to take "politics out of relief" were rejected by a one vote margin.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28—Senate passage of the battlescarred emergency W. P. A. appropriation bill this afternoon was generally forecast by Republican and Democratic leaders as controversy over the measure was resumed today.

The senate having voted late yesterday, 47 to 46, to slash President Roosevelt's recommendation of $875,000,000 to $725,000,000, the amount already approved by the house, first amendments slated to be adopted today were those putting iron-clad prohibitions against "W. P. A. in politics."

A fight was brewing over the senate appropriation committee's action in knocking out a house provision to prevent more than a 25 percent differential in wages for similar work as between different areas of the nation.

Solons from Dixie were battling for restoration of the house language in the hope that it would result in sending more relief money to the South and remove what was claimed to be unfair wage discrimination against the southland.

Wage Law Opposed

However, there was a strong combination of northern Republicans and Democrats, who insisted the house language would in effect repeat the "prevailing wage" law, under which W. P. A. workers are supposed to receive the same rate of pay that is given in private industries within the localities of W. P. A. work.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28—Supreme court justices held a secret conference today, with a possibility that final agreement may be reached on the decision to be handed down in the Tennessee Valley Authority case.

The court convenes on Monday to deliver opinions. While rumors have spread of a split in the court over constitutionality of the T. V. A. power program, New Deal officials are hopeful that a court ruling on the question will be announced on Monday.

Another long-awaited decision which may be handed down revolves around the question of validity of the anti-Child Labor amendment, now before the states for ratification.

Prof. Felix Frankfurter will take the oath of office on Monday and don the robes of an associate justice. Filling the vacancy caused by the death of Justice Cardozo, he will give the court a full bench of nine members for the first time this term.

VICTIM TO LIVE DESPITE WOUND

WEEHAWKEN, N. J., Jan. 28—With a razor gash in his throat, Leo Saluto, 20 year old infantile paralysis sufferer and victim of an attempted "mercy murder," struggled for life in a Weehawken hospital today and physicians expressed hope that they might save him.

His father, Joseph Saluto, was dead. He cut his own throat in the Saluto home at Union City after scribbling this note to his wife: "Mary, I think we are both dead by now. I done this terrible thing because Leo is so sick. He won't live until tomorrow morning. I want to tell a lot more, but I haven't the nerve to write any more."

Authorities said the father waited until his wife and daughter were away from home, then took a razor and crept to the room where his son was sleeping. Without saying a word, Saluto leaped over the son and slashed his throat.

He then ran to the next room, wrote the note and ended his own life.

CINCINNATI THIEVES FLEE WITH PAYROLL OF $4,300

CINCINNATI, Jan. 28—Although the license number of their car was broadcast within a few minutes after they had held up employees of the Cincinnati Galvanizing Co. and escaped with a $4,300 payroll yesterday, two armed bandits still were at large today.

Local and county police and officers in outlying villages quickly took up posts at important crossroads after the alarm was spread but the bandits eluded the net.

Their faces masked by dirty handkerchiefs, the armed men scooped the money from a desk in the second floor office after threatening two men and 10 women employees. More than 200 employees were in the factory on the first floor at the time of the robbery.

Hungry Collegian, Named As Thief, May Go Free

CHICAGO, Jan. 28—The plight of a Northwestern university honor student who ended up in jail as a burglar because he was hungry today moved university officials and the man who had him jailed to start a fight to free him.

The student, Harry E. Albright, 21, Kansas City, was being held in county jail under $3,500 bond for arraignment Monday on a burglary charge.

Albright was caught red-handed in L. W. Newcomer's restaurant. He immediately confessed, explaining:

"My parents in Kansas City sent me money for tuition, but I had to make enough money to live on. I got by barely until last month. Then things began getting tougher, since last Sunday I'd had to eat was two candy bars. That isn't much to go on for four days."

"So I went to the tea shop and broke open the door. It wasn't the first time. This overcoat I'm wearing came from that first burglary."

COLUMBUS, Jan. 28—Appointment of J. W. Wilson, of Nelsonville, as personnel director of the state highway department, effective Feb. 1, was announced today by State Highway Director Robert L. Beightler.

Wilson, former county engineer of Athens county, succeeds J. Matthew Carr, of Dennison, who finally resigned after first denying the Republican administration on the grounds that his position was protected by civil service.

Insurgent Attempt To Catch Fleeing Soldiers Seen In Maneuvers

Financial Help From Britain Sought For Persons Now On Foreign Soil

LONDON, Jan. 28—Firm notice that government Spain intends to continue fighting came today from both sectors still unconquered by the insurgents.

Premier Juan Negrin, in a broadcast from Gerona, according to the Spanish press agency, announced: "Fresh reserves of troops have been transported from the center of Spain. New war material is being put into operation."

General Jose Miaja, commander of the Madrid and southeastern defenses, the man who stopped the insurgents at Madrid, told the agency in an interview at Valencia: "The central zone is capable and confident that it will be able to repeat its feats of defense and attack. The circumstances are grave, but far from hopeless."

Defense will be centered at Valencia.

PERPIGNAN, France, Jan. 28—A daring maneuver to bottle up the Spanish government's defeat-shattered Catalan army was seen by observers in Perpignan today as a possible explanation of reports of insurgent troop debarkations at Port Bou.

'MERCY MURDER' VICTIM TO LIVE DESPITE WOUND

WEEHAWKEN, N. J., Jan. 28—With a razor gash in his throat, Leo Saluto, 20 year old infantile paralysis sufferer and victim of an attempted "mercy murder," struggled for life in a Weehawken hospital today and physicians expressed hope that they might save him.

His father, Joseph Saluto, was dead. He cut his own throat in the Saluto home at Union City after scribbling this note to his wife: "Mary, I think we are both dead by now. I done this terrible thing because Leo is so sick. He won't live until tomorrow morning. I want to tell a lot more, but I haven't the nerve to write any more."

Authorities said the father waited until his wife and daughter were away from home, then took a razor and crept to the room where his son was sleeping. Without saying a word, Saluto leaned over the son and slashed his throat.

He then ran to the next room, wrote the note and ended his own life.

CINCINNATI THIEVES FLEE WITH PAYROLL OF $4,300

CINCINNATI, Jan. 28—Although the license number of their car was broadcast within a few minutes after they had held up employees of the Cincinnati Galvanizing Co. and escaped with a $4,300 payroll yesterday, two armed bandits still were at large today.

Local and county police and officers in outlying villages quickly took up posts at important crossroads after the alarm was spread but the bandits eluded the net.

Their faces masked by dirty handkerchiefs, the armed men scooped the money from a desk in the second floor office after threatening two men and 10 women employees. More than 200 employees were in the factory on the first floor at the time of the robbery.

TIGERS FOLD IN LAST THREE MINUTES, LOSING 31-23 THRILLER TO HILLSBORO

LOSS OF GUARD ON FOULS ENDS LOCALS' CHANCE

Bumgarner Forced Out With Red And Black Leading By Two Points

EARLY EDGE WIPED OUT

Reserves, Led By Heffner, Gain Victory; Freshman Team To Play

The breaks went the wrong way Friday evening at Hillsboro, so the Circleville Tigers were charged with a 31-23 defeat today instead of a victory that they might have had. The most disastrous break came with just two minutes and 45 seconds to play when the fourth personal foul was called on Warren Bumgarner, ace of the Tiger defense and spearhead of its attack. The Red and Black, leading at that time by two points, saw that team lead get hot to go on to victory.

Bumgarner had played a whale of a ball game. His loss cost the Red and Black what looked like a victory.

But Bumgarner's loss was not the only thing that hurt the Red and Black. Paul Walters, who has been leading the Tiger scoring brigade, was struck in the midriff by an elbow during the scrimmage just before the half ended, and at the intermission he suffered an attack of cramps that required attention. He refused to remain out of action, but his play was handicapped.

Three Indians Hit
And another thing that hurt the Tigers—the ability of the Hillsboro center and guards, Stanforth, Lamb and Wilkin, to hit the hoop from almost any place on the hardwood. All but four of Hillsboro's points were tallied by this trio.

The Highland county crew, victorious over Dayton Stivers, Wilmington and several other good teams, started out in the first period to put the Red and Black behind. The period ended 5-3. The Hillsboro lads went out again in the second session to run up their edge, gaining a 13-8 advantage at halftime. But the third period found the Tigers in rare form, cutting into the Hillsboro lead and gaining a two-point edge of their own, 18-16, as the final session started.

That two point margin was protected until less than three minutes remained to be played. With Bumgarner's loss the Tiger defense folded.

Hillsboro's team, one of the best the Tigers have met, was surprised by the strength of Roy Black's quintet. A strong Hillsboro defense that kept the Tiger forwards, Smith and Davis, scoreless in the first half had much to do with the team's victory.

Circleville's reserves, paced by Bill Heffner with three action shots, finished on the long end of a 22-18 score. The game was fast the whole way.

Circleville takes on Upper Arlington's unbeaten team next Friday evening in the Circleville Athletic Club gymnasium. Tiger freshmen will get into action again this evening, playing a preliminary to the Ashville-Groveport game at Ashville. The freshman crew won 31-14 from Walnut township's reserves last Wednesday evening.

MacPhail Sees Dodgers As Old League Titlists

BY LAWTON CARVER

NEW YORK, Jan. 28—Generously admitting that the Chicago Cubs may furnish some opposition and look like the team to beat, Larry MacPhail, who does most of the thinking and all of the talking for the Brooklyn Dodgers, today predicted that his club would be in the World Series next fall. The rest of the clubs really didn't figure with the Dodgers. This is no gag, I hasten to add.

The red-haired business manager of the Brooklyn managerie tacitly disparages the entire National league—except the champion Cubs—by dismissing the rest of the clubs "as though they weren't even in the same circuit. He says he is sold on the Dodgers as they stand right now, his only worry being the pitching staff, and they probably will be somewhat better than all right in that department. Too, this positively is not a gag.

Demanding quite fiercely that you name a team that can beat the Dodgers out of the so-called bunting, he then compares your choice and his club, throws in a few angles of one kind and another, garnishes the whole thing with what are known as economics, and ends the discussion finally with the Dodgers virtually established as a shoo-in for their first pennant since 1920.

During the intervening years, they have been giving a good imitation of circus clowns and giving the fans many a laugh and groan, but all that is over now, said MacPhail, and unless the Cubs are lucky they will wind up in second place, where they belong, considering what the Dodgers have to offer this time. Please believe me, this is no gag.

"For one thing," said MacPhail, the man who introduced night baseball to Brooklyn and the yellow baseball to the game, "we are not relying on Pitcher Van Mungo this season and we don't care whether he signs or remains there at his home in South Carolina, nor are we concerned with Third Baseman Joe Stripp. I hope he doesn't even show up at the Spring camp.

"We've got a satisfied club, virtually every man having been given a substantial raise, and right now I've got more signed contracts than both of the other New York clubs combined. We have no holdout troubles, except for Pitcher Tot Pressnell, and he's going to be all right."

NEW YORK, Jan. 28—An "authentic report" that Joe Louis had been signed by Promoter Mike Jacobs to defend his heavyweight championship against Two-Ton Tony Galento at New York June 29, was branded as "ridiculous" by all principals concerned today.

"Inasmuch as I'm supposed to be the promoter of the fight, I wish someone would tell me about it if the bout is made," said Jacobs. "No such fight has been signed and none will be until Galento beats a first-class opponent to prove he is entitled to fight Louis."

Joe Jacobs, Galento's manager, also denied the "authentic report." "The fight hasn't been signed," Jacobs roared, "but it should be. We want it. We'd fight Louis tomorrow if he'd agree to it."

MAKO AND DOEG TO MEET IN PALM BEACH TOURNAMENT

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla., Jan. 28—Gene Mako of Los Angeles today will face Johnny Doeg of Newark, N. J., in the semi-finals of the South Florida tennis tournament of West Palm Beach.

In the other semi-final, Wayne Sabin of Portland, Ore., will face Jack Tidball of Los Angeles.

Mako advanced into the semi-finals by beating Jack Ohlhaber of West Palm Beach yesterday, 6-3, 6-4; Doeg defeated George Slaton of West Palm Beach, 12-10, 6-2; Tidball won over Burtz Boulware of Atlanta and Sabin was extended 10-8, 6-8 to beat John Shostrom of Chicago.

Bob Terhune, Clarksburg coach, was the thorn in the side of the Pickaway township alumni Friday evening when Clarksburg won a 40-38 contest played on the Ross county court. Terhune pumped in six buckets, leading the Clarksburg aggregation and tying Creighton Anderson of Pickaway for top scoring honors.

ASHVILLE KEEPS SLATE CLEARED IN 43-19 GAME

Several Close Contests On Friday Evening Card; Saltcreek Ahead

Darby township girls Friday night clinched The Daily Herald's trophy emblematic of the county basketball league championship when they turned back the Pickaway Pirates lassies in an interesting 18-15 game to finish the season undefeated. Only a tie blemishes the Darby record, but all other teams in the county have lost at least two ball games so there is no chance that Darby may be tied for the cup, which is held now by Pickaway.

Scores of games played Friday:

Boys
Monroe 21, Williamsport 20.
Muhlenberg 22, Perry 21.
Saltcreek 25, Jackson 23.
Ashville, 43, Washington 19.
Scioto 34, New Holland 21.
Pickaway 27, Darby 16.

Girls
Darby 18, Pickaway 15.
Scioto 12, New Holland 10.
Ashville 20, Washington 13.
Perry 19, Muhlenberg 16.
Monroe over Williamsport, score not reported.

The Ashville powerhouse continued to function on all cylinders, turning back the scrappy Washington team with ease on the Washington court. The losing team was handicapped by ejection of George DeLaVergne on personal early in the second period, and by illness of Johnny Leist, clever floor man. Leist attended the game but was unable to participate. He has been suffering from a rheumatic fever.

Gregg with 15 and Walden with 12 counters topped the Ashville offensive.

Scioto's forces came from behind to overcome the New Holland Bulldog varsity. New Holland led 12-11 at halftime, but Scioto swung into action to run up a 34-21 margin. The shooting of Beers, center, led the Commercial Point quintet.

Pickaway's Pirates ran up a 19-3 lead at the half over Darby township, but saw themselves outplayed in the second half, the game ending 27-16. All Pickaway's scoring was done by Wilson, Boggs and Dunkle.

Monroe edged the Williamsport crew in a 21-20 thriller. Long hitting the hoop for nine points for the winners.

Muhlenberg took another sensational game from Perry, 22-21, on the Atlanta court.

Saltcreek won its first victory of the season in a 25-23 battle with Jackson.

CROSBY'S GOLF TOURNEY DRAWS BEST OF NATION

RANCHO SANTE FE, Cal., Jan. 28—Win, lose or draw, the Bing Crosby $3,000 amateur-pro tournament which started over the beautiful Rancho Santa Fe course today will find a new face in the winner's circle tomorrow when the checks and trophies are passed out.

Sam Snead, who was the victor last year and the year before, has gone back to his Virginia home and is not in the running.

In place of Snead and his partner being favorites, it appeared that young Dick Metz and Dr. Hugh Strathearn, of Lakeside, would occupy that position. Dick won the Oakland and San Francisco events and his 66 was low at Lakeside—so he can be reckoned ready and fit to go. His partner is the physician who prescribed treatment and exercises which have brought Metz from the sick bed to the peak of his golf today.

The Bing Crosby tournament is a most colorful affair, perhaps because of the personality of the man behind it. The entry has drawn such names as Guy Kibby, Richard Arlen, Randolph Scott, Tom "Bud" Ward, Marshall Cluff, Lieut. Ken Rogers, and a host of others—not to mention more than six score top ranking professionals.

Amateurs have come from North, South, East and West to compete in this tournament. Marvin Ward comes from Spokane, Washington; Lt. Rogers comes from Alabama; Johnny Dawson comes from Chicago; Jack French

MacPhail Sees Dodgers As Old League Titlists

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—Generously admitting that the Chicago Cubs may furnish some opposition and look like the team to beat, Larry MacPhail, who does most of the thinking and all of the talking for the Brooklyn Dodgers, today predicted that his club would be in the World Series next Fall. The rest of the clubs really didn't figure with the Dodgers. This is no gag, I hasten to add.

The red-haired business manager of the Brooklyn menagerie tacitly disparages the entire National league—except the champion Cubs—by dismissing the rest of the clubs as though they weren't even in the same circuit. He says he is sold on the Dodgers as they stand right now, his only worry being the pitching staff, and they probably will be somewhat better than all right in that department. Too, this positively is not a gag.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Jan. 28.—The "sit down" strike of the St. Paul club of the American Hockey association was over today just about as quickly as it started.

Players, who had heard there were no funds to pay their salaries due today, had refused for a short time yesterday to start for Kansas City for a league game until they were paid.

However, they called off their strike after W. F. Grant, association president, said the league would guarantee that they would be paid. With that assurance, the players left by auto for Kansas City.

JACOBS DENIES GALENTO FIGHT WITH CHAMPION

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—An "authentic report" that Joe Louis had been signed by Promoter Mike Jacobs to defend his heavyweight championship against Two-Ton Tony Galento at New York June 29, was branded as "ridiculous" by all principals concerned today.

"Inasmuch as I'm supposed to be the promoter of the fight, I wish someone would tell me about it if the bout is made," said Jacobs. "No such fight has been signed and none will be until Galento beats a first-class opponent to prove he is entitled to fight Louis."

Joe Jacobs, Galento's manager, also denied the "authentic report."

"The fight hasn't been signed," Jacobs roared, "but it should be. We want it. We'd fight Louis tomorrow if he'd agree to it."

ASHVILLE KEEPS SLATE CLEARED IN 43-19 GAME

Several Close Contests On Friday Evening Card; Saltcreek Ahead

Darby township girls Friday night clinched The Daily Herald's trophy emblematic of the county basketball league championship when they turned back the Pickaway Pirate lassies in an interesting 18-15 game to finish the season undefeated. Only a tie blemishes the Darby record, but all other teams in the county have lost at least two ball games so there is no chance that Darby may be tied for the cup, which is held now by Pickaway.

Scores of games played Friday:

Boys

Monroe 21, Williamsport 20. Muhlenberg 22, Perry 21. Saltcreek 25, Jackson 23. Ashville, 43, Washington 19. Scioto 34, New Holland 21. Pickaway 27, Darby 16.

GIRLS

Darby 18, Pickaway 15. Scioto 12, New Holland 10. Ashville 20, Washington 13. Perry 19, Muhlenberg 16. Monroe over Williamsport, score not reported.

The Ashville powerhouse continued to function on all cylinders, turning back the scrappy Washington team with ease on the Washington court. The losing team was handicapped by ejection of George DeLaVergne on personal early in the second period, and by illness of Johnny Leist, clever floor man. Leist attended the game but was unable to participate. He has been suffering from a rheumatic fever.

Gregg with 15 and Walden with 12 counters topped the Ashville offensive.

Scioto's forces came from behind to overcome the New Holland Bulldog varsity. New Holland led 12-11 at halftime, but Scioto swung into action to run up a 34-21 margin. The shooting of Beers, center, led the Commercial Point quintet.

Pickaway's Pirates ran up a 19-3 lead at the half over Darby township, but saw themselves outplayed in the second half, the game ending 27-16. All Pickaway's scoring was done by Wilson, Boggs and Dunkle.

Monroe edged the Williamsport crew in a 21-20 thriller, Long hitting the hoop for nine points for the winners.

Muhlenberg took another sensational game from Perry, 22-21, on the Atlanta court.

Saltcreek won its first victory of the season in a 25-23 battle with Jackson.

CROSBY'S GOLF TOURNEY DRAWS BEST OF NATION

RANCHO SANTE FE, Cal., Jan. 28.—Win, lose or draw, the Bing Crosby $3,000 amateur-pro tournament which started over the beautiful Rancho Santa Fe course today will find a new face in the winner's circle tomorrow when the checks and trophies are passed out.

Sam Snead, who was the victor last year and the year before, has gone back to his Virginia home and is not in the running.

In place of Snead and his partner being favorites, it appeared that young Dick Metz and Dr. Hugh Strathearn, of Lakeside, would occupy that position. Dick won the Oakland and San Francisco events and his 66 was low at Lakeside—so he can be reckoned ready and fit to go. His partner is the physician who prescribed treatment and exercises which have brought Metz from the sick bed to the peak of his golf today.

The Bing Crosby tournament is a most colorful affair, perhaps because of the personality of the man behind it. The entry has drawn such names as Guy Kibby, Richard Arlen, Randolph Scott, Tom "Bud" Ward, Marshall Duffield, Lieut. Ken Rogers, and a host of others—not to mention more than six score top ranking professionals.

Amateurs have come from North, South, East and West to compete in this tournament. Marvin Ward comes from Spokane, Washington; Lt. Rogers comes from Alabama; Johnny Dawson comes from Chicago; Jack French hails from San Francisco; and Grant Rice registers from New York. A total of more than 200 amateurs sent in entry applications while the professional entry was more than 120 players.

BUCKS AND JIMMY HULL SEEK CHICAGO VICTORY

COLUMBUS, Jan. 28.—Ohio State's basketball team tonight faces Chicago at the state fairgrounds coliseum, assured of a tie for the Big Ten cage leadership if they win.

Jimmy Hull, captain of the Buck squad, also faced a tough task. Hull can go into the conference individual scoring lead if he maintains his previous average of 16 points per game.

SEABISCUIT MAY NOT COMPETE IN ANITA CONTEST

SANTA ANITA, Cal., Jan. 28.—Seabiscuit will stay in his barn today when the $10,000 San Felipe handicap is run at Santa Anita.

Although he hadn't been officially scratched yet, his owner Charles S. Howard, has let it be known that he will keep the great horse out of the race.

There are 20 sprinters in the six-furlong event. Seabiscuit drew post position 9, practically in the middle, and would be next to Bert Baron's Specify, a known bad actor at the post. Howard doesn't want to take any chances.

Seabiscuit has to win $36,000 more to equal Sun Beau's record in purse winnings. Howard doesn't believe today's chances in the San Felipe would be worth the risk, particularly with the $100,000 Santa Anita handicap only a little more than a month away.

With Seabiscuit out of the race, A. G. Vanderbilt's Air Flame was favored over the field.

After Jesus' death He appears to His disciples as they walk sadly along the road together, but they know Him not.

They asked Him to stay with them, and when they want food He tells them where to cast their nets, which are filled

After they have eaten the disciples know their Lord, who asks Peter if he loves Him, and tells him, "Feed my lambs."

THE GARDEN CLINIC

By VICTOR H. RIES, O. S. U. floriculturist

QUESTION: I am having quite a bit of trouble with those little green lice on my sultanas and lantanas. It also seems sometimes that I can see a small insect fly from off the lantana. Will you kindly advise me what to do.

ANSWER: The plant lice on your house plants may be very easily controlled by spraying them two or three times at intervals of a week with Black Leaf 40, being sure to add the soap recommended, or one of the pyrethrum or rotenone sprays which may be purchased at your florist or seed store. Remember that it will be necessary to hit every one of the lice in order to kill them.

The other insect on your lantana is no doubt the white fly which is very difficult to control except in the greenhouse where they may be fumigated with cyanide. If you will use one of the rotenone or pyrethrum sprays and spray them regularly once a week or oftener you will gradually reduce the number of them. Be sure to spray the underside of the leaves.

QUESTION: Is it possible to start tulips indoors and transplant them to the beds out-of-doors later in the Spring to fill in the bare spots where others have died?

ANSWER: Although it is getting pretty late now to plant tulips, in fact you will have difficulty buying any now, if you can obtain them, I would suggest they be potted up immediately and either put in a coldframe or else set on top of the ground with wood ashes or soil around the pots labeled by her sister, Mrs. Ida McCorkle of Circleville.

Rosedale Garden Club Meets

Mrs. Nelle Hickie gave a very good paper on "Fushias" and Mrs. Mae Ross "Cactus" Mrs. Adah Dresbach read a very appropriate poem. The president, Miss Mary Deffenbaugh, will leave soon for Rosewell, New Mexico and during her absence the vice-president, Mrs. Lela Pontius will have charge of the meetings. The next meeting will be Feb. 28, at the home of Mrs. Lulu Pontius with Mrs. Lela Pontius assisting hostess.

annual flowers. Will you please advise me which annuals are best suited for shade?

ANSWER: On the whole, annual flowers will not withstand as much shade as perennials but those that will grow very nicely with a half day of sun are the small-flowered petunias, sweet alyssum, cornflower, calendula, snapdragons, nigella, and candytuft. Our new bulletin on annual flowers will be ready in about a month's time and can be secured from your county agricultural agent.

QUESTION: Is it too late to plant tulip bulbs out-of-doors?

ANSWER: Although I doubt very much whether you will still be able to buy tulip bulbs, if you can, I would place them out-of-doors immediately and mulch them with a foot or more of leaves and they should bloom fairly satisfactory this Spring.

QUESTION: I read in your local newspaper recently that charcoal was necessary mixed with the soil to successfully force paper-white narcissus indoors. Is this true?

ANSWER: Unfortunately, a good bit of the garden information that you read has been written by those who obtain their information from books without having had adequate garden experience; consequently, some of their recommendations are not always up-to-date. Whereas our great-grandfathers thought that charcoal was necessary in potting soil and in forcing bulbs, today we know that it is not.

QUESTION: I understand the University will send someone to my home to landscape my yard and that the University will furnish the evergreens without charge.

ANSWER: This would be wonderful if it were true, but I think you can see, if you just stop to think, that it would be not only impossible for the State University to furnish free plants to all the people that would demand them, but also obviously unfair to the nurserymen and others who depend upon it to make their living in selling these plants. Neither is it possible for the University to furnish either individual landscape plans. May I suggest that you consult your local landscape architect, landscape gardener, or some local nursery that employs a trained landscape man to help you with this.

NAZI CRISIS

IT IS agreed by all observers that Nazi Germany is now in serious economic trouble. It has an unfavorable balance of trade, buying more than it sells. Its debt is mounting to levels that the government does not dare confess, because Hitler has had industry concentrated on unproductive armament. Goods made for export have been dumped abroad at far less than their value. The Austrian and Czechoslovakian territory seized is not immediately productive. The army grows larger, requiring more expenditure on it.

Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, head of the Reichsbank, was removed because even he could no longer pull any more rabbits out of the hat. It remains to be seen whether Schacht's successor can do any better.

Plans to bleed the Jews and make the outer world ransom them have not brought much money into the Nazi treasury. As the Jews are ruined, they are unable to pay further "fines" and become an economic liability.

There may be one more master-stroke for Hitler and his crew. They may use the army now for profit, making forays against neighboring countries, and demanding ransom of them as Bismarck did of France in 1871. That might work with Roumania, which could pay in oil.

COMFORTS AHEAD

MILITARY and civilian flight surgeons, meeting at Kansas City, studied ways and means to make passengers comfortable when airliners fly in the stratosphere. According to the announcement of the Civil Aeronautics Authority, subjects discussed included use of oxygen in the cabins of present airliners, and possible physical reactions to flying in the supercharged cabins of a new type of airliners ready for test flights.

From another part of the country and another gathering of specialists, the New York State Chiropractic Society, comes word of a proposed study of automobile seats. The idea is to improve them so as to reduce back strain and increase the health and comfort of riders and drivers. There are many groups looking for ways to benefit us all by adding to our comfort, convenience, pleasure, or health as we go about our daily affairs. Americans, it is clear, are to keep on "going places and seeing things" with the greatest of ease.

We are always speaking of the Latin-American countries as "democracies" and then grieving because they're not democratic. They call themselves "republics."

'ROUND CIRCLEVILLE . . Hour by Hour

PAGES from the Diary of An Antiquated Reporter:

Up at the usual hour and soon away to Columbus, where were gathered big and little newspapermen from all over the state holding annual convention. Shop talk and still more shop talk all through the day with practically universal optimism regarding business for the new year. And in the evening the annual banquet.

Governor John Bricker was there and I took time out to voice approval of his economy program and received new assurance that he is sincere. Talked to Earl Griffith, secretary of state, Charlie Sherwood, welfare director, Tom Herbert, attorney general, Arthur Day of the supreme court and others. A lot is going on in Columbus that is not getting into the newspapers and it is just as well, too, if the Republican program is to remain constructive rather than destructive. We who pay the taxes should profit by the program. Note that I said 'should', for a politician has to prove everything he says to me.

Heard a story that surpasses anything our local gunners can relate. Two men who had imbibed too freely were in the den of one of the men and on the wall was a moose head.

"Nice head you got there," said one.

"Sure is," said the other. "Got it up in Canada."

"Shoot it?"

"No, I caught it."

"You're crazy. No man can catch a moose. You shot it."

"I didn't shoot it. I caught it."

"Alright, if you didn't shoot it, you tell me how you caught it."

"Well, I was in the woods hunting moose and noticed that my gun was dirty. So, I started cleaning it. My father always told me to clean my guns with turpentine and I always do. I had a bottle with me. Just about the time I had the gun all apart a big moose came up and stood right in front of me. I couldn't shoot him and that made me mad. So, I threw the turpentine over him. He turned and ran away and I followed him. I followed him for miles and miles and when I finally caught up with him that head there is all that was left."

Col. L. S. Galvin, the Lima publisher, attended the Columbus meeting and when he retired for the night he borrowed a watch from Charlie Hinkle, his advertising director, as his own was at the jeweler's for repairs. The Colonel retired, declaring that he intended to sleep until ten o'clock the next morning. The next noon he came down storming. He had aroused from his slumber and lay in bed enjoying the rest for a while, then looked at Charlie's watch. It reported 8:15. So, the colonel, even though he was ready to get up remained right in bed. He had expressed intention of remaining in bed until 10 and he would remain in bed until ten. Time passed slowly and he wished to get up, but the watch had said 8:15. He fought it out for a long, long time and then looked at the watch again. It still said 8:15. It had stopped. Hinkle didn't hear all the story. He suspected the ending and ducked, being seen only in distant corners all the rest of the day.

S. E. C. INSURANCE PROBE

WASHINGTON—Chief Justice Hughes does not know it, but Securities and Exchange Commission investigators have been digging into one accomplishment of his past life in minute detail.

In 1905-6, Hughes, then a budding young lawyer, won national renown with a sensational investigation of seventeen leading insurance companies. The probe won Hughes the governorship of New York. The report of his findings, published in 1906, filled ten volumes, but apparently they had little net effect.

Early next month the SEC will open a new insurance investigation. But it will not disclose any essentially new conditions, even though it is the first ever to be made by the Federal Government. For it will show that the evils exposed by Hughes more than three decades ago are as rampant as ever.

The SEC examiners have been using Hughes' report as the text-book and bible of their own work, and it has turned up hoards of pay dirt. Of all the sensations the SEC hearings will bring to light, most sensational will be the fact that the principal abuses Hughes uncovered in 1905-6 still exist today, and in exaggerated degree.

GIGANTISM

In his report, Hughes severely condemned the vast size of the leading insurance companies:

"The business (of the Mutual, the Equitable, New York Life and Metropolitan Life companies) has grown beyond reasonable limits. Notwithstanding the fact that they have long since passed the point where further enlargement can benefit their policyholders, they have resorted to every effort to obtain new business, regardless of the expense which is reflected in diminishing dividends. Extravagant commissions have been paid and these have been supplemented by liberal bonuses and prizes."

"Their membership is so large and their resources so vast as to make the question of responsible control and conservative management one of extreme difficulty, and their magnitude if permitted to grow unrestricted will soon become a menace to the community."

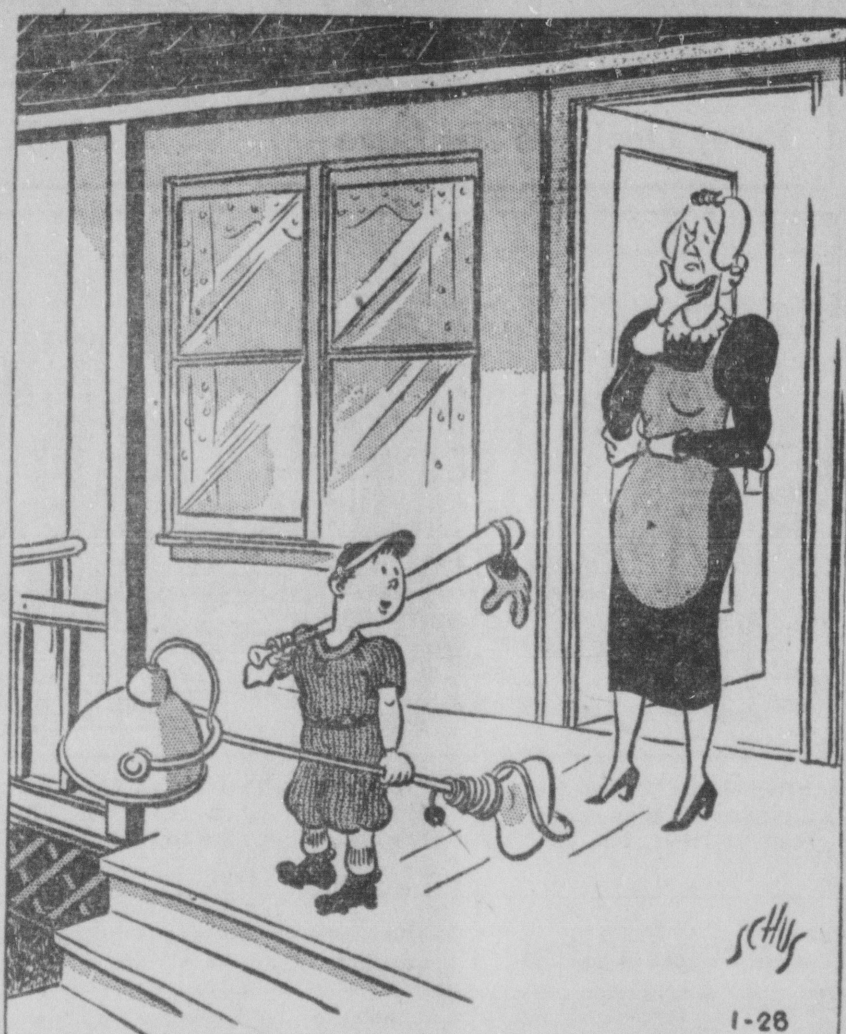

The SEC will submit the following chart to show that despite Hughes' grave warning issued 33 years ago, the companies have been allowed to increase in size many times over:

	1905	1938
Metropolitan	$176,429,015	$4,720,000,000
Mutual	495,864,650	1,349,000,000
Equitable	428,048,337	2,106,000,000
New York Life	474,567,673	2,520,000,000

As a limitation on unsound growth, Hughes proposed that a maximum of $150,000,000 a year be fixed for the writing of new insurance. The SEC will report wholesale disregard of this recommendation with these spectacular figures:

In 1929 alone, the four companies wrote a total of over 7 billion dollars in new policies. Since 1907, Metropolitan has written in excess of $65,000,000,000; Equitable more than 19 billion; New York Life over 15 billion; and the Mutual in excess of 9 billion.

Helium Beneficial In Medical Science

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

THE USES found for the gas called helium represent beautifully the idea that the discoveries of science may be either beneficial or destructive according as man decides to use them.

Helium can be used to inflate Zepplin bags and military balloons. So long as the Zepplin is used for transportation this is all right, but when it floats over a city and drops bombs on school buildings full of young children, it is time for some more humanitarian purpose to control its use.

And even more beneficent uses for it than air travel have been found. We described a year or so ago, in this column, its use in asthma and pneumonia when it first began to be applied to these diseases. Now it can be said definitely that it has sufficient value to justify the United States in refusing to export it for military purposes in order to reserve it for the medical applications.

Its Principle

The principle on which helium acts consists of its lightness. It is only one-seventh the weight of nitrogen. Nitrogen constitutes 79 per cent of the air. It is entirely unnecessary in sustaining life; it simply dilutes the oxygen which practically constitutes the rest of the 21 per cent of air, other gases existing only as minor fractions or traces.

It occurred to a physician watching a patient struggling in a paroxysm of asthma that a lighter gas than air, containing as much oxygen, would constitute a great relief. The asthmatic condition is due to a constriction of the bronchial tubes so that they are narrowed down to the diameter of the shaft of a pin. In order to get enough air into the lungs to sustain life, he has to pump his muscles until he is almost exhausted. It did seem logical under these circumstances that a thinner air would go in with less effort. And this worked out in practice.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

WATCH THE TRICKSTER

INCORRIGIBLE psychic bidders can sometimes be made to pay heavily for their fancy ideas if opposed by players who keep a canny watch on them. Sound use of the natural meanings of bids and doubles will usually reveal the true situation to the opponents and may leave the psychic bidder's partner the only one fooled.

Col. L. S. Galvin, the Lima publisher, attended the Columbus meeting and when he retired for the night he borrowed a watch from Charlie Hinkle, his advertising director, as his own was at the jeweler's for repairs. The Colonel retired, declaring that he intended to sleep until ten o'clock the next morning. The next noon he came down storming. He had aroused from his slumber and lay in bed enjoying the rest for a while, then looked at Charlie's watch. It reported 8:15. So, the colonel, even though he was ready to get up remained right in bed. He had expressed intention of remaining in bed until 10 and he would remain in bed until ten. Time passed slowly and he wished to get up, but the watch had said 8:15. He fought it out for a long, long time and then looked at the watch again. It still said 8:15. It had stopped. Hinkle didn't hear all the story. He suspected the ending and ducked, being seen only in distant corners all the rest of the day.

(Dealer: South. East-West vulnerable.)

Holding the North cards of this deal was a player known to be plagued by too much imagination. After his partner's pass, he visualized the opponents having a sure heart game, so decided to forestall it with an opening psychic bid of 1-Heart. East doubled, South redoubled and West passed.

North couldn't stand that redouble, so bid 2-Diamonds. East bid 2-Spades, South doubled and West made the whole situation clear to his partner with 2-No Trump. This showed hearts and diamonds amply.

stopped and also probably a bit of something in clubs, a perfect picture of his holding.

News about his partner's heart stoppers was all East needed to know to see that a heart game should be in the cards for his side. So he leaped to 4-Hearts without further ado. Now South thought he saw a winning defense. A lead of his diamond K, then another to the A indicated by his partner's bidding, followed by a diamond ruff, would leave him where he needed only a spade trick to set the contract. So he doubled.

The post-mortem on this deal was not pleasant to hear, after East made an overtrick, losing only one trick in each minor.

Tomorrow's Problem

(Dealer: West. Neither side vulnerable.)

If the first three tricks against South's 4-Heart contract are the spade A, spade 9 to the K and heart 2 to the J, K and A, why should West next lay down his diamond A?

Angkor is a ruined city in the jungles of Camodia, Asia. It was discovered in the latter part of the last century by a French traveler Angkor was founded in the ninth century and lasted until the 14th, maintaining one of the most sumptuous courts in all history for its kings. A midwestern editor says women are better news gatherers than men. The men, of course, haven't the natural advantage of the wash day backyard telegraph system.

DEATH AT THE MANOR

BY M. E. CORNE

RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

CHAPTER THIRTY-SEVEN

THE DINNER hour had come and gone, and according to Hawkins, who brought me my tray, a dreary affair dinner had been.

"Miss Daphne didn't come down, miss," he informed me in mournful accents. "I sent her dinner upstairs, but it was returned untasted."

"And the others?"

"Mr. Horace presided. He looked badly. The guests were present but—here Hawkins' voice faltered—"but there were those empty chairs, miss—"

Those empty chairs I shuddered. Poor Mr. Richard! What was he eating and where? He and Toots Lemoine!

At a quarter to nine I stuck my head out the door and listened for sounds from above. In her bedroom on the third floor Eliza lay, unconscious and hovering between life and death. Dr. Richards from the town had been in constant attendance for several hours. She had not a chance to recover—the fall down the stairs had fractured her skull. Her last labored breath, I knew, would be the signal for the arrest of Richard Witherspoon upon a charge of willful murder. At present he was being detained in jail as a material witness.

As I stood there half in and half out of the doorway the telephone on my bed table tinkled uncertainly. Without waiting for it to ring full blast, I ran to lift the receiver.

"Elsie?" It was Phil calling.

"Yes?"

"Is she still alive?"

"I think so."

"Listen! Will you call me at the jail as soon as she passes out?"

"Why—" I hesitated. How callous Phil was! And yet Eliza meant nothing to him, dead or alive, and nothing to me, except that I could not view the poor thing's death—calmly and waiting for life—were a worm that had been stepped on and put out of the way. "I'll call you," I said at last. And as he was about to hang up I asked: "What about Mr. Richard?"

"The kid's sitting tight. Won't open his mouth until he sees his lawyer. That's Toots' doing; she's warned him that he needn't talk unless he wants to."

"Oh! I blessed Toots!"

"Elsie"—Phil's tone took on that edge of eagerness I had come to know so well—"you could do us a big favor and the kid as well—"

"I could? How?"

"Get hold of Daphne and make her talk!"

"Daphne?" For a moment I saw red. "You think I'd do that?"

"Now wait a sec! It isn't as bad as it sounds. I've a hunch that Richard isn't guilty of murder. I'm pretty sure that he's mixed up in some dirty work with Beeman, and that it's ten to one he stole the emeralds. If he'd come through with that, well—answering to theft is better than frying!"

"Elsie!" I exclaimed, and I was silent so long that he jerked his receiver hook impatiently.

"Elsie! Are you there?"

"Yes, Phil, you aren't trying to fool me, are you?"

He gave a disgusted snort. "I'm giving you a chance to do the kid a favor. His best chance lies in coming clean, but the poor dope is too scared to realize it!"

I was not entirely convinced.

"What makes you think Daphne will confide in me?"

"She's a woman, isn't she? And desperate. Believe me, honey, I'm not baiting a trap. I'm playing a long shot!"

"All right," I gave my consent. "I'll try. When—where does the ex-humation take place?"

"Ellis and Mac are leaving for the cemetery shortly. I'm laying low here. Don't forget: give me a ring the minute the old girl kicks off!"

I repeated my promise and hung up. Hastily I smoothed my hair and powdered my nose. As I left the room the clock beside the phone chimed nine. I had an hour in which to win Daphne Witherspoon's confidence. At ten I had an important appointment in the arboretum. And, unless I were greatly mistaken, Daphne herself would be ready and anxious to escape my company when that hour arrived.

Quietly I tiptoed down the corridor. The door of Daphne's room was tightly closed. I lifted my hand to knock. Someone spoke my name. Mr. Horace was coming rapidly toward me. At the sight of him I gasped—he looked like a living ghost!

He said tonelessly: "Eliza has just passed away."

"Oh, I am so sorry!" And I was. This morning Eliza had been alive; this evening she was dead. And the murderer at large!

"She died without speaking," he continued. "She was not able to tell us who she was. Poor Richard."

"But he isn't guilty!" I protested vehemently.

"Richard is, of course, innocent," said his father with no uncertainty in his voice. "He couldn't commit murder!"

"I am going to Miss Daphne," I said as he made no move to leave me. "I thought perhaps she might be able to help."

"I see." His small, colorless eyes bored into mine. The flicker of a smile passed over his face and was gone. "Perhaps she can help, Miss Ritter," he said softly, "perhaps she can."

When he had gone I tapped lightly on the door. I had promised Phil to call him the moment of Eliza's passing; but now I meant to break that promise. What difference could an hour make, more or less? What difference to him? To Richard? To Eliza? Perhaps in the space of that sixty minutes—resolutely I turned the knob.

At my entrance Daphne whirled from the window. She cried sharply: "I didn't bid you come in!"

"No," I said quietly, "you didn't."

And though the room was in semidarkness I could see that she had been crying. Her cheeks were streaked; there was a jagged path traced through the peach of her powder; her eyes were red rimmed and swollen. I stepped forward.

"Won't you believe that I am your friend? That I want to help you?"

"Help!" She laughed mirthlessly. "How can you help? How can anyone help? Richard is in jail for murder!"

"You can help him. Why do you hesitate?"

"I?" Fear leaped into her eyes. "Why do you say that?"

I countered: "Why not? It is true, isn't it?"

"So you think I have a motive in keeping my brother in jail?"

She turned her back upon me and took a cigarette from a mirrored box. When she had lighted it, she faced me through the smoke. She had control of herself. She said lightly: "You have been reading mystery stories, Miss Ritter. The fear was gone; her eyes were curtained, inscrutable."

"No—" I sat down on the edge of the bed. "I haven't been reading mystery stories; I have been living one."

She inhaled deeply. "Really? How thrilling!" Her hand holding the cigarette shook slightly.

I went on:

"The story I've been living is about a girl and a boy. They are brother and sister. The boy is troubled; he owes a sum of money to a crooked money lender; he is being blackmailed by an unscrupulous gold-digger. The girl knows about the boy's trouble. She knows about the emeralds. She knows that the boy is innocent of murder. She knows who killed her grandmother and her mother—and Eliza—"

"Eliza!" echoed Daphne, and the fear had returned, a monster was devouring her.

I nodded. "She died a moment ago. Soon the boy will be charged with murder. It looks bad for him. He has so many things to explain. The part that this boy and this girl seem to have overlooked—" I paused.

"Yes?" said Daphne. "Yes?"

"They seem to have overlooked the fact that if the boy is guilty of theft, that if he confessed his guilt, a great many of the things that puzzle the police would be cleared up. The boy and the girl don't understand this; they don't understand that stealing isn't murder."

"But suppose the boy admits— theft? Wouldn't the police then have a motive for—for murder?"

Gone was her pretense of indifference. She was leaning forward, her hands clenched.

I replied slowly: "The girl would have to tell all she knows."

"Oh!" Swiftly the curtain descended. "Your story is most melodramatic, Miss Ritter," she said, shrugging her shoulders. "Surely if this girl loves her brother, she wouldn't hide any evidence that might free him."

"She might," I risked a shot in the dark. "She might if she loves also the one whom she suspects is really guilty."

"That's not true!" she cried in such anguish that I knew my shot had hit home. "You've no right to suggest such a thing!"

"You've no right to remain silent!" I challenged her. "If there is such a murder, it will be on your head!"

"Go! Oh, go away!" And there was such torment in her tone that I had not the heart to torture her further.

In my own room I dialed the number of the jail.

"She is dead, Phil, I whispered over the wire. "She is dead."

"O. K., Elsie. Have you attended to the other matter?"

"I did, but it was no go."

"No?" Well, don't worry. Has Horace sent for the coroner?"

"I don't know."

"O. K.," he said again. "I'll bring him out. Sit tight and remember I'm for you."

"I'll remember."

Early next month the SEC will open a new insurance investigation. But it will not disclose any essentially new conditions, even though it is the first ever to be made by the Federal Government. For it will show that the evils exposed by Hughes more than three decades ago are as rampant as ever.

The SEC examiners have been using Hughes' report as the text-book and bible of their own work, and it has turned up hoards of pay dirt. Of all the sensations the SEC hearings will bring to light, most sensational will be the fact that the principal abuses Hughes uncovered in 1905-6 still exist today, and in exaggerated degree.

GIGANTISM

In his report, Hughes severely condemned the vast size of the leading insurance companies:

"The business (of the Mutual, the Equitable, New York Life and Metropolitan Life companies) has grown beyond reasonable limits. Notwithstanding the fact that they have long since passed the point where further enlargement can benefit their policyholders, they have resorted to every effort to obtain new business, regardless of the expense which is reflected in diminishing dividends . . . Extravagant commissions have been paid and these have been supplemented by liberal bonuses and prizes . . ."

"Their membership is so large and their resources so vast as to make the question of responsible control and conservative management one of extreme difficulty, and their magnitude if permitted to grow unrestricted will soon become a menace to the community."

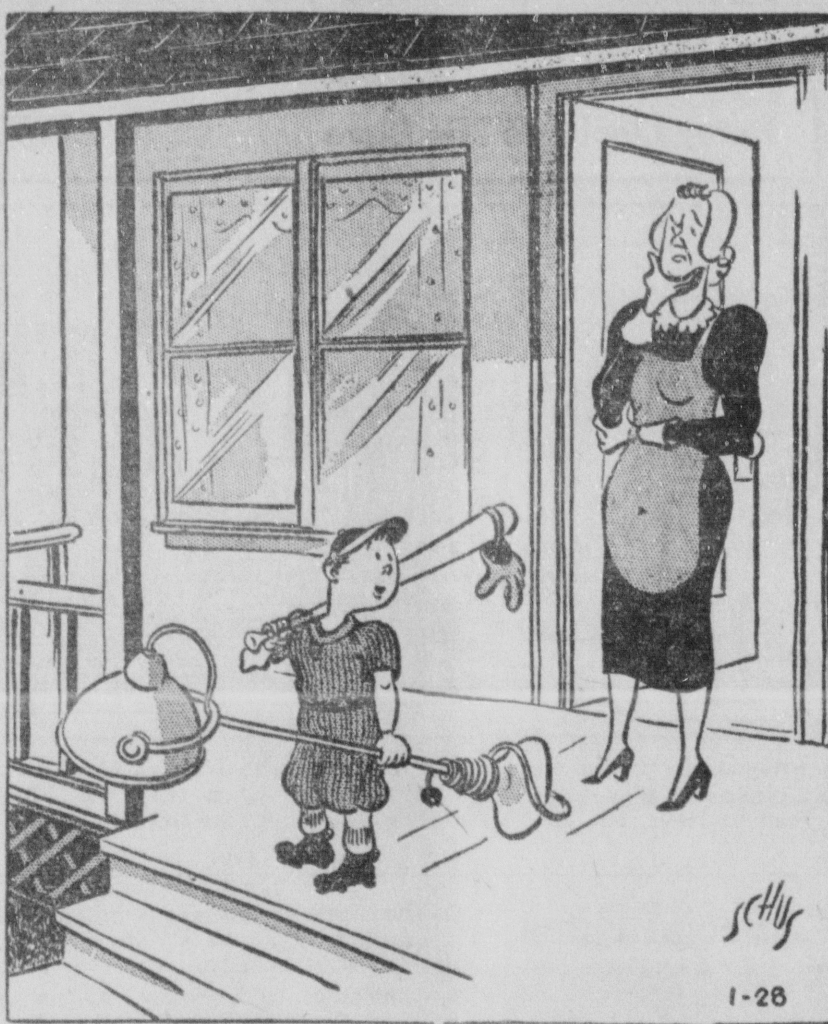

The SEC will submit the following chart to show that despite Hughes' grave warning issued 33 years ago, the companies have been allowed to increase in size many times over:

	1905	1938
Metropolitan	$176,429,015	$4,720,000,000
Mutual	495,864,650	1,349,000,000
Equitable	428,048,337	2,106,000,000
New York Life	474,567,673	2,520,000,000

As a limitation on unsound growth, Hughes proposed that a maximum of $150,000,000 a year be fixed for the writing of new insurance. The SEC will report wholesale disregard of this recommendation with these spectacular figures:

In 1929 alone, the four companies wrote a total of over 7 billion dollars in new policies. Since 1907, Metropolitan has written in excess of $65,000,000,000; Equitable more than 19 billion; New York Life over 15 billion; and the Mutual in excess of 9 billion.

Helium Beneficial In Medical Science

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

THE USES found for the gas called helium represent beautifully the idea that the discoveries of science may be either beneficial or destructive accordingly as man decides to use them.

Helium can be used to inflate Zeppelin bags and military balloons. So long as the Zeppelin is used for transportation this is all right, but when it floats over a city and drops bombs on school buildings full of young children, it is time for some more humanitarian purpose to control its use.

And even more beneficial uses for it than air travel have been found. We described a year or so ago, in this column, its use in asthma and pneumonia when it first became known.

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

gan to be applied to these diseases. Now it can be said definitely that it has sufficient value to justify the United States in refusing to export it for military purposes in order to reserve it for the medical applications.

Its Principle

The principle on which helium acts consists of its lightness. It is only one-seventh the weight of nitrogen. Nitrogen constitutes 79 per cent of the air. It is entirely unnecessary in sustaining life; it simply dilutes the oxygen which practically constitutes the rest of the 21 per cent of air, other gases existing only as minor fractions or traces.

It occurred to a physician watching a patient struggling in a paroxysm of asthma that a lighter gas than air, containing as much oxygen, would constitute a great relief. The asthmatic's condition is due to a constriction of the bronchial tubes so that they are narrowed down to the diameter of the shaft of a pin. In order to get enough air into the lungs to sustain life, he has to pump his muscles until he is almost exhausted. It did seem logical under these circumstances that a thinner air would go in with less effort.

And this worked out in practice.

According to Dr. Alvan L. Barach, in his testimony before the Congressional committee on the uses of helium, they had not lost a single patient in an asthmatic attack in the hospitals where helium is being used. The treatment may be truly life-saving in some instances, when patients are in extremis and no pulse can be felt.

Another Use

In caisson disease, which afflicts divers, helium mixtures have also been used to advantage. Its action here is quite as logical as in asthma. Caisson disease occurs when there has been confinement to high atmospheric pressure, and then too rapid exposure to ordinary pressure. The explanation of it is that during the high pressure period, nitrogen is forced into the tissues of the body. With rapid reduction in pressure, the nitrogen forms bubbles in the muscles and causes cramps, which are known in the trade as the "bends." The replacement of an easily diffusible nitrogen mixture naturally corrects this trouble.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

H. N.: "Please let me know if any of the glandular products sold in drug stores are of benefit in relieving disturbances of the menopause?"

Answer—Yes, but the subject is so complicated that I could not advise you to use them except under a doctor's direction.

M. W.: "Please let me know if alfalfa is a good food for a diabetic?" Answer—So far as I know, alfalfa is just as good as any green vegetable for a diabetic, but since there are many equally good foods that are more palatable, I see no reason for using it. The diabetic must be on a restricted diet for life, so make it as attractive as possible.

WATCH THE TRICKSTER INCORRIGIBLE psychic bidders can sometimes be made to pay heavily for their fancy ideas if opposed by players who keep a canny watch on them. Sound use of the natural meanings of bids and doubles will usually reveal the true situation to the opponents and may leave the psychic bidder's partner the only one fooled.

Col. L. S. Galvin, the Lima publisher, attended the Columbus meeting and when he retired for the night he borrowed a watch from Charlie Hinkle, his advertising director, as his own was at the jeweler's for repairs. The Colonel retired, declaring that he intended to sleep until ten o'clock the next morning.

The next noon he came down storming. He had aroused from his slumber and lay in bed enjoying the rest for a while, then looked at Charlie's watch. It reported 8:15. So, the colonel, even though he was ready to get up remained right in bed. He had expressed intention of remaining in bed until ten and he would remain in bed until ten. Time passed slowly and he wished to get up, but the watch had said 8:15. He fought it out for a long, long time and then looked at the watch again. It still said 8:15. It had stopped. Hinkle didn't hear all the story. He suspected the ending and ducked, being seen only in distant corners all the rest of the day.

News about his partner's heart stoppers was all East needed to know to see that a heart game should be in the cards for his side, so he leaped to 4-Hearts without further ado. Now South thought he saw a winning defense. A lead of his diamond K, then another to the A indicated by his partner's bidding, followed by a diamond ruff, would leave him where he needed only a spade trick to set the contract. So he doubled.

The post-mortem on this deal was not pleasant to hear, after East made an overtrick, losing only one trick in each minor.

North couldn't stand that redouble, so bid 2-Diamonds. East bid 2-Spades. South doubled and West made the whole situation clear to his partner with 2-No trump. This showed hearts and diamonds amply

DEATH AT THE MANOR

BY M. E. CORNE

RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

CHAPTER THIRTY-SEVEN

THE DINNER hour had come and gone, and according to Hawkins, who brought me my tray, a dreary affair dinner had been.

"Miss Daphne didn't come down, miss," he informed me in mournful accents. "I sent her dinner upstairs, but it was returned un-tasted."

"And the others?"

"Mr. Horace presided. He looked badly. The guests were present but—here Hawkins' voice faltered—"but there were those empty chairs, miss—"

Those empty chairs. I shuddered. Poor Mr. Richard! What was he eating and where? He and Toots Lemoine!

At a quarter to nine I stuck my head out the door and listened for sounds from above. In her bedroom on the third floor Eliza lay, unconscious and hovering between life and death. Dr. Richards from the town had been in constant attendance for several hours. She had not a chance to recover—the fall down the stairs had fractured her skull. Her last labored breath, I knew, would be the signal for the arrest of Richard Witherspoon upon a charge of willful murder. At present he was being detained in jail as a material witness.

As I stood there half in and half out of the doorway the telephone on my bed table tinkled uncertainly. Without waiting for it to ring fully blast, I ran to lift the receiver. "Elsie?" It was Phil calling. "Yes?"

"Is she still alive?"

"I think so."

"Listen! Will you call me at the jail as soon as she passes out?"

"Why—I hesitated. How callous Phil was! And yet Eliza meant nothing to him, dead or alive, and nothing to me, except that I could not view the poor thing's death—calmly and coolly as though she were a worm that had been stepped on and put out of the way. 'I'll call you,' I said at last. And as he was about to hang up I asked: 'What about Mr. Richard?'"

"The kid's sitting tight. Won't open his mouth until he sees his lawyer. That's Toots' doing; she's warned him that he needn't talk unless he wants to."

"Oh! I blessed Toots!"

"Elsie"—Phil's tone took on that edge of eagerness I had come to know so well—"you could do us a big favor and the kid as well—"

"I could! How?"

"Get hold of Daphne and make her talk!"

"Daphne! For a moment I saw red. 'You think I'd do that?'"

"Now wait a sec! It isn't as bad as it sounds. I've a hunch that Richard isn't guilty of murder. I'm pretty sure that he's mixed up in some dirty work with Beeman, and that it's ten to one he stole the emeralds. If he'd come through with that, well—answering to theft is better than frying!"

"Oh! I exclaimed, and I was silent so long that he jerked his receiver hook impatiently.

"Elsie! Are you there?"

"Yes, Phil, you aren't trying to fool me, are you?"

He gave a disgusted answer. "I'm giving you a chance to do the kid a favor. His best chance lies in coming clean, but the poor dope is too scared to realize it!"

I was not entirely convinced.

"What makes you think Daphne will confide in me?"

"She's a woman, isn't she? And desperate. Believe me, honey, I'm not baiting a trap. I'm playing a long shot."

"All right," I gave my consent. "I'll try. When—when does the exhumation take place?"

"Ellis and Mac are leaving for the cemetery shortly. I'm laying low here. Don't forget: give me a ring the minute the old girl kicks off!"

I repeated my promise and hung up. Hastily I smoothed my hair and powdered my nose. As I left the room the clock beside the phone chimed nine. I had an hour in which to win Daphne Witherspoon's confidence. At ten I had an important appointment in the arboretum. And, unless I were greatly mistaken, Daphne herself would be ready and anxious to escape my company when that hour arrived.

Quietly I tiptoed down the corridor. The door of Daphne's room was tightly closed. I lifted my hand to knock. Someone spoke my name. Mr. Horace was coming rapidly to ward me. At the sight of him I gasped—he looked like a living ghost!

He said tonelessly: "Eliza has just passed away."

"Oh, I am so sorry!" And I was. This morning Eliza had been alive; this evening she was dead. And the murderer at large!

"She died without speaking," he continued. "She was not able to tell us who showed her. Poor Richard. 'But he isn't guilty!' I protested vehemently."

"Richard is, of course, innocent," said his father with no uncertainty in his voice. "He couldn't commit murder!"

"I am going to Miss Daphne," I said as he made no move to leave me. "I thought perhaps she might be able to help."

"I see." His small, colorless eyes bored into mine. The flicker of a smile passed over his face and was gone. "Perhaps she can help, Miss Ritter," he said softly, "perhaps she can."

When he had gone I tapped lightly on the door. I had promised Phil to call him the moment of Eliza's passing; but now I meant to break that promise. What difference could an hour make, more or less? What difference to him? To Richard? To Eliza? Perhaps in the space of that sixty minutes—resolutely I turned the knob.

At my entrance Daphne whirled from the window. She cried sharply: "I didn't bid you come in!"

"No," I said quietly, "you didn't." And though the room was in semidarkness I could see that she had been crying. Her cheeks were streaked; there was a jagged path traced through the peach of her powder; her eyes were red rimmed and swollen. I stepped forward.

"Won't you believe that I am your friend? That I want to help you?"

"Help!" She laughed mirthlessly. "How can you help? How can anyone help? Richard is in jail for murder!"

"You can help him. Why do you hesitate?"

"I? Fear leaped into her eyes. 'Why do you say that?'"

"I countered. 'Why not? It is true, isn't it?'"

"So you think I have a motive in keeping my brother in jail?" She turned her back upon me and took a cigarette from a mirrored box. When she had lighted it, she faced me through the smoke. She had control of herself. She said lightly: "You have been reading mystery stories, Miss Ritter." The fear was gone; her eyes were curtained, inscrutable.

"No—I sat down on the edge of the bed. I haven't been reading mystery stories; I have been living one."

She inhaled deeply. "Really? How thrilling!" Her hand holding the cigarette shook slightly.

I went on: "The story I've been living is about a girl and a boy. They are brother and sister. The boy is troubled; he owes a sum of money to a crooked money lender; he is being blackmailed by an unscrupulous gold-digger. The girl knows about the boy's trouble. She knows about the emeralds. She knows that the boy is innocent of murder. She knows who killed her grandmother and her mother—and Eliza—"

"Eliza!" echoed Daphne, and the fear had returned, a monster was devouring her.

I nodded. "She died a moment ago. Soon the boy will be charged with murder. It looks bad for him. He has so many things to explain. The part that this boy and this girl seem to have overlooked—" I paused.

"Yes?" said Daphne. "Yes?"

"They seem to have overlooked the fact that if the boy is guilty of theft, that if he confessed his guilt, a great many of the things that puzzle the police would be cleared up. The boy and the girl don't understand this; they don't understand that stealing isn't murder."

"But suppose the boy admits— theft? Wouldn't the police then have a motive for—murder?" Gone was her pretense of indifference. She was leaning forward, her hands clenched.

I replied slowly: "The girl would have to tell all she knows."

"Oh!" Swiftly the curtain descended. "Your story is most melodramatic, Miss Ritter," she said, shrugging her shoulders. "Surely if this girl loves her brother, she wouldn't hide any evidence that might free him."

"She might." I risked a shot in the dark. "She might if she loves also the one whom she suspects is really guilty."

"That's not true!" she cried in such anguish that I knew my shot had hit home. "You've no right to suggest such a thing!"

"You've no right to remain silent!" I challenged her. "If there is another murder, it will be on your head!"

"Go! Oh, go away!" And there was such torment in her tone that I had not the heart to torture her further.

In my own room I dialed the number of the jail.

"She is dead, Phil, I whispered over the wire. 'She is dead.'"

"O. K., Elsie. Have you attended to the other matter?"

"I did, but it was no go."

"No?" Well, don't worry. Has Horace sent for the coroner?"

"I don't know."

"O. K.," he said again. "I'll bring him out. Sit tight and remember I'm for you."

"I'll remember."

DEBATE TEAMS HAVE PRACTICE MEET TUESDAY

Tuesday afternoon at 3:00 Circleville high debaters met Portsmouth High's all-senior debate squad at Circleville. There were two debates going on at the same time, one in the auditorium and the other in the "Little Theater". The debate between Circleville's negative and Portsmouth's affirmative was judged by Miss Alice May of Circleville. Representing the affirmative were Richard Bohr and James Williams; the negative, Warren Bumgarner and Bernice Strawser.

STARS SAY—

For Saturday, January 28 MIXED INFLUENCES hold sway on this day, inciting conflict and bafflement. There are indications of a definite and calamitous downfall, with disfavor in the eyes of superiors, employers or those in power, while at the same time there is presage of a sudden and surprising rise to prestige and good fortune, through an unlooked-for stroke of luck. Much is at stake, but sound judgment, right principles and the friendly intervention of influential persons are likely to turn the tide favorably.

Those whose birthday it is are on the threshold of a year in which there may be many conflicting forces at work, detrimental ones assailing the stability of work, fortune and social position. At the same time there is presage of the intervention of powerful interests, suddenly and quite unpredictable, turning the tides of favor and fortune by a surprising coup, and this should be captured by wisdom, integrity and sagacity rather than intrigue or collusion.

For Sunday, January 29

SUNDAY'S HOROSCOPE is one of major importance, judging by the powerful lunar and mutual operations. This might imply a drastic, revolutionary upheaval of life, with all its angles, urges and objectives undergoing a complete and surprising about-face. The emotional or romantic elements seem primarily involved, but the auguries are for high culminations in gratification or joy in the midst of bewildering circumstances.

Those whose birthday it is should be prepared for a year of radical and surprising change. Amidst confusion and bewilderment, this native may be completely "carried away" from his old traditions, environs, and experiences, with the dramatic adventure spelling much gratification.

A child born on this day will have extraordinary talents, with creative insight and ability in novel or singular directions, which may take it to dramatic heights in adventure or public acclaim.

FILMS PRESENTED TO HIGH PUPILS

Pupils of Circleville Hi were entertained Wednesday morning by a sound film "Let's Sing Again", starring Bobby Breen.

Two shorts were shown before the feature film. These were "Curiosities" and "Bubbles and Troubles". The first dealt with curious occupations and the second was an animated cartoon.

In "Let's Sing Again" Bobby Breen plays the part of a talented youngster, who when his mother dies is committed to an orphanage. He is passionately fond of music and because of this deserts the orphanage and travels with a circus. An Italian, a former music teacher, also at this time with the circus, becomes attached to him and they fare forth together. After many adventures and through aid of Pasquale, Bobby is reunited with his father, a famous opera singer.

Immediately following the entertainment for the high school the same film was shown to the elementary grades from High, Franklin, Corwin, and Walnut street schools.

SR. G. R. ADVISER ADDRESSES CLUB

Miss Elma Rains was guest speaker at the Junior Girl reserve meeting Wednesday. She spoke on "Girl Reserves", using as her main topic three points of the Girl Reserves code. She remarked that fifteen countries of the world have organizations, and that the United States alone has 325,000 teen-age girls who are members.

"Club life offers a variety of activities", Miss Rains said. "Through participation in the numerous interests and projects of the group, every girl has a chance to learn how to understand herself, how to get along with girl and boy friends; how to appreciate people of other races and of different personalities; and how to work effectively with girls from different walks of life."

During the business part of the meeting President Pollyanna Friedman appointed committees for the Junior-Senior Reserve dance which will be held February 18. These committees will meet with the girls from the Senior club who have been appointed by President Martha Goeller.

Dance programs will be provided by Phyllis Young, chairman, Rose Anne Griner, Mary Ruth Owens, and Mary Adele Snider.

Refreshment committee is composed of Helen Beck, chairman, Dorothy Glenn, Lois Madison, and Virginia McDowell.

Jane Klingsmith, with the aid of Margaret Adkins, Peggy Goeller, and Letty Strawser, will help decorate the social room for this affair.

She announced that the Executive Committee will continue its plan of awarding some special insignia to the members of the club who stand highest in achievements in club work. At the end of the second semester there will be more awards given.

After the presentation, President Goeller introduced Miss Mary Wilder, who completed a talk on her trip to England. Miss Wilder had begun the talk at an earlier meeting this year.

Refreshments were served by a committee including Betty Bach, chairman, Ruth Clark, Evadelle Elliott, Bonita Hulse, and Betty McGinnis at the close of the program.

Eva Lamaster chairman, Pat Bennett, Mary Eloise Curl, Mary Hettlinger, and Goldie Isaacs formed a clean-up committee.

POETRY CLUB IS HOST TO LOCAL WOMEN WRITERS

Mrs. W. W. Robinson and Mrs. Brunelle Downing were guest speakers at a Poetry club tea held Monday afternoon. Mrs. Robinson, who is listed among Ohio's poets, spoke on the writing of poetry and read several of her own poems.

"One can get pleasure from writing the simplest verse," Mrs. Robinson stated.

She then read several original poems including "April Twilight", "Poem", "Roots", and "Ballad of Blades and Bells."

Next, Mrs. Downing spoke briefly on poetry written by children and read several selections from "Creative Youth" which was published by the students of Lincoln High school. She also read three of her own poems, "Lullaby", "To a Lovely Child", and "Compensation".

Next week narrative poetry will be read and discussed by the club.

JUNIORS CHOOSE MANNING DRAMA

This week a committee of juniors, appointed by President Paul Walters, assisted by dramatics instructor Samuel R. Johnson, announced their selection for a junior class play production.

"Life Begins at Sixteen", by Hilda Manning, is the play selected. This play is a three act comedy calling for six male and nine feminine characters.

Mr. Johnson has conducted try-outs in the high school's "Little Theater" each day this week. He states that he expects to announce part of his cast at the beginning of next week.

Last year the present graduating class presented the play "New Fires", a three act comedy by Charles Quimby Burdette.

CLUB ORDERS NEW MUSIC

During the meeting Thursday of the Senior Girls' Glee club, the members, heard selections from sample song books.

It was decided to order additional copies of selections which the club already has as well as a number of new pieces.

THEATRES

AT THE GRAND

When the Frankenstein "Monster" and the Dracula "vampire" got together on the Universal lot for a new assault on the vulnerable nerves of film audiences, the result was bound to be the most spine-tingling production ever to reach the screen. The new streamlined shocker, "Son of Frankenstein," starring Boris Karloff and Bela Lugosi, proves just that in its screening at the Grand theatre, beginning with a special midnight show Saturday night at 11:30 and continuing through Thursday.

Karloff again stalks as a man-made monster, wearing a hideous makeup weighted down with heavily padded clothes and lead soled shoes terrorizing the country side, and providing many unexpected thrills. Lugosi portrays an unforgettable figure as the crazed, broken necked shepherd who befriends the monster and helps him in his nefarious marauding.

Basil Rathbone, Lionel Atwill, Josephine Hutchinson, Emma Dunn, Donnie Dunagan, and Edgar Norton have other roles in this thriller.

Friday and Saturday brings to the screen of the Grand Theatre "Little Tough Guys in Society," starring Edward Everett Horton, Mary Boland, and the Little Tough Guys.

The second feature on this program, stars Bob Baker in his latest western, "Honor Of the West."

Coming soon to the Grand theatre is the life story of the most infamous outlaw in the history of the United States, "Jesse James," featuring Tyrone Power, Henry Fonda, and Nancy Kelly.

AT THE CLIFTONA

Although today she is one of filmdom's first ladies, Merle Oberon, who romances with Gary Cooper in Samuel Goldwyn's "The Cowboy and the Lady," which opens Sunday at the Cliftona Theatre, insists that she is still learning new things and having new experiences in movie land. In fact, the brunette beauty points to her latest Goldwyn picture to illustrate what she means.

To begin with, it was a new experience for Merle to be teamed romantically with Gary—it was their first screen coalition. Then, because of the action of the story, the British star had to learn how to "roll her own" cigarettes. Although it wasn't the easiest task in the world, she became rather proficient after several lessons from no one less than Gary himself.

Continuing to list her "firsts" in "The Cowboy and the Lady," there was also the amusing matter of being "dunked" in a swimming pool. This, too, was due to the

AT THE GRAND
When the Frankenstein "Monster" and the Dracula "vampire" got together on the Universal lot for a new assault on the vulnerable nerves of film audiences, the result was bound to be the most spine-tingling production ever to reach the screen. The new streamlined shocker, "Son of Frankenstein," starring Boris Karloff and Bela Lugosi, proves just that in its screening at the Grand theatre, beginning with a special midnight show Saturday night at 11:30 and continuing through Thursday.

Karloff again stalks as a man-made monster, wearing a hideous makeup weighted down with heavily padded clothes and lead soled shoes terrorizing the country side, and providing many unexpected thrills. Lugosi portrays an unforgettable figure as the crazed, broken necked shepard who befriends the monster and helps him in his nefarious marauding.

Basel Rathbone, Lionel Atwill, Josephine Hutchinson, Emma Dunn, Donnie Dunagan, and Edgar Norton have other roles in this thriller.

Friday and Saturday brings to the screen of the Grand Theatre "Little Tough Guys in Society," starring Edward Everett Horton, Mary Boland, and the Little Tough Guys.

The second feature on this program, stars Bob Baker in his latest western, "Honor Of the West."

Coming soon to the Grand theatre is the life story of the most infamous outlaw in the history of the United States, "Jesse James," featuring Tyrone Power, Henry Fonda, and Nancy Kelly.

FARM BUREAU ORGANIZATIONS CONDUCT ANNUAL MEETING, HEAR REPORTS

GREAT VOLUME REPORTED FOR 1938 ACTIVITY

Low Prices Bring Figures Below Previous Year, Officials Say

The volume of business of the Pickaway County Farm Bureau and its affiliated organizations increased during 1938 but lower prices held receipts from sales below the previous year.

Total business for the year by the Farm Bureau and its affiliated organizations amounted to $2,028,663.27 as compared with $2,267,454.76 in 1937. Business in 1937 had showed an increase of eight percent over 1936 when the total business amounted to $2,008,911.01.

Reports of the various organizations were presented Saturday at the annual meetings of the Farm Bureau and the Pickaway Livestock association held in Memorial hall. Business meetings of both organizations were held during the morning with a joint session in the afternoon.

During the year the Pickaway Livestock association handled 13,581,950 pounds of livestock for a total value of $1,076,708.49. In 1937 the livestock handled amounted to 13,123,710 pounds with sales amounting to $1,198,401.91, due to higher prices.

Reports on the volume of business of other affiliated organizations included the Pickaway Dairy Cooperative association, $423,511.43; Pickaway Grain Company, $382,817.49, fertilizer, $19,594.38, paint $1,237.06, limestone, sundries, etc., $2,612.09; farm loans closed on farms, $30,600, and production loans closed on chattels, $91,552.33. Dividends paid during the year amounted to $18,718.86.

Memberships for the Farm Bureau in 1938 amounted to 599. Dues paid to Dec. 31, 1938 totaled 441.

The afternoon program included music by the Grange chorus directed by Mrs. James Moffitt, music by the Carpenter brothers, instrumental trio from Darbyville, and selections by a vocal trio consisting of the Rev. S. N. Root, Wayne Luckhart and Richard Ballard, of Tartton.

Murray D. Lincoln, executive secretary of the Ohio Farm Bureau, spoke on "Cooperation, a Way of Living."

Willis Corcoran, Ross county, and James Willis, Atlanta, were reelected directors of the Pickaway Livestock association. Their terms were the only ones expiring this year.

Fifty-fifty matching would mean that $20,000,000 would be made available, but whether that amount will be sufficient is something the committee of eight must discover, McGregor said.

"It won't be necessary for this committee to visit the urban areas," he pointed out. "We know all about the relief needs, what we need to know now is how to solve the problem of financing."

Enabling legislation designed to "loosen up" municipality funds was contained in four bills introduced in the house last week.

One would provide that intangible taxes be paid into the county general fund; another that inheritance taxes be credited to the municipal general fund; another would levy local gross receipts and excise taxes and levy local taxes on intangibles for one year, and the fourth would credit motor vehicle license fees to the municipal general fund.

Urban representatives have contended that these enabling measures would fall far short of providing matching money and their pleas may be heeded by the legislature when it considers matching for the year, McGregor said.

Legislature sideliights—"ripper" legislation is being handled in the main by Senate Majority Leader Frank E. Whittemore . . . the "ripper" bills called reorganization administration prefers to have time measures.

Sen. Lawrence Kane (R-Cincinnati) says credit agencies have "mushroomed" almost overnight since State Auditor Joseph T. Ferguson, a Democrat, took over the pre-audit of relief. Accredited agencies are complaining they haven't been given much relief reporting work, Kane said.

President Roosevelt's defeat in his appeal for $875,000,000 to carry on W. P. A. until June 10—present funds will be exhausted by February 7, according to W. P. A. officials—was hailed jubilantly by the so-called economy bloc in congress.

AIR JAYWALKERS APPEAR AS MENACE TO AVIATORS

DENVER, Jan. 28—Its getting so now that a man can't meander through the empty space of the sky without keeping a wary eye peeled for jaywalkers. Lieut. Claude E. Pitman Jr., believed today.

Lieut. Pitman filed a report at the army air school explaining how he happened to have a large eagle wedged in a hole in the left wing of his army attack plane.

"I was flying an A17-A attack plane from Barksdale, La., to Denver and traveling about 170 miles an hour when suddenly a big eagle, flying about 30 miles an hour, appeared in front of me. It was too late to avoid an accident. We just collided."

pressed the opinion that General Francisco Franco might be trying to outflank the government armies by driving a wedge from the sea along the Franco-Spanish frontier.

Some observers discounted the reports on the theory that Franco does not have the means of debarking landing parties large enough to carry out successfully such a sensational hazardous enterprise.

Others, on the other hand, pointed to indications of rapidly increasing demoralization in the government armies, apparently borne out by reports of columns of government soldiers streaming in disorder toward the French border. One of these reports was that 20,000 government soldiers were seen early today near Prat De Mollo, seemingly on their way to seek refuge in France.

PARIS, Jan. 28—Amounting to veritable abandonment of Catalonia, the Spanish government intends to remove all available troops to Valencia, the Paris-Midi said it understood today.

The paper said also that the Spanish government has authorized all soldiers and civilians to flee into France.

Throughout northeastern Catalonia, the plight of refugees is pitiful, according to messages received in Paris, and their suffering is intensified by repeated insurgent air raids.

More than 100 persons were killed when the insurgents staged a night raid on Granollers, which is now packed with refugees, it was reported. Raids are frequent on Figueras.

PARIS, Jan. 28—France has decided to admit all refugees from Spain, it was believed today following a meeting of the council of ministers at which the problem was taken up.

British Aid Needed

ASSOCIATES OF SLAIN 'NUMBER' MAN ARRESTED

CHILLICOTHE, Jan. 28—Two former associates of Walter Kelly, late Gary, Indiana "numbers" cperator, are being held here in the probe of the "mystery slaying" of Kelly in Chicago on Jan. 8.

Kelly was found dead in his car on a Chicago street. He had been killed by four shotgun charges.

The two men were arrested after a call was received from a shoe store that two Negroes had purchased some hose, proffered a $10 bill in payment, then allegedly tried to get an extra $5 in change from the clerk. The men were later observed in a parked car and arrested.

Both men told Chief Poole they had worked for Kelly. Both admitted they had been on the road for two or three weeks.

Low Prices Bring Figures Below Previous Year, Officials Say

The volume of business of the Pickaway County Farm Bureau and its affiliated organizations increased during 1938 but lower prices held receipts from sales below the previous year.
